

Bus Stop Dreams – “Don't Forget to Breathe” - from the hen house out into the world

On September 8th last year the duo Bus Stop Dreams released two songs on the debut single “The Kiss”, with Jan Johansen and Pär Enqvist respectively as lead vocalists. When they release the debut album “Don't Forget to Breathe” on November 6th it has grown to an international collaborative featuring 7 singers and 6 songwriters from Sweden, Germany and Canada.

A few songs that didn't fit in was the start of it all. An Autumn day in 2009 Lasse Thomasson was sitting in the rebuilt hen house in Älta, outside Stockholm, studying the remains of two terminated band projects. The thought of the songs that never found their true home propelled new creativity and new arrangements. He contacted his colleague Pär Berglund from the music company Blindmen to find singers. The mutual gut feeling after the first meeting with the new recordings bore the energy for the vision of Bus Stop Dreams: music with warmth, lead vocals chosen for what each song demands, to be themselves as the persons in the middle of the life they really are and with that a constant dialogue with the listeners.

Three singles later and more than a year in contact with a steady-growing international audience, they release the debut album “Don't Forget to Breathe”. Ten songs which breathes soft classic rock with country vibes, but where there's also room for beautiful pop melodies and dystopic group cuddles.
